TESTS AND TALKS VARY FROSH PROGRAM

Reception for Freshman Class in Carpenter Hall Thursday Night Successful

DEANS GIVE INTERVIEWS

Freshman week started officially on Thursday evening when the entire class of freshmen who are entering Earlham, the Freshman Week staff, and the members of the faculty were guests of the college at a dinner served in the Earlham dining room. Immediately after dinner the entire groups were guests at a general reception in the lobby of the first floor of Carpenter Hall. An address was given by President Edwards and short talks were given by Professor Kelly, Hickman and Long for the faculty. Wilmer Kenworthy greeted the freshmen on behalf of the upper classmen and Calvert Craig, of Indianapolis, replied for the freshman class. Lloyd Outland and Margaret Harold entertained with music during the evening.

At chapel Friday morning, Dean H. N. Wright talked on "Adjustments to College" and announcements were made for the day.

The mathematics aptitude and training tests were given during the day and several interviews with Dean Clyde Milner and Dean Ernestine Milner were held in both morning and afternoon. A treasure hunt furnished amusement from four to six and after dinner the group were led by George Batt in Earlham songs. At eight o'clock the deans and student councils had charge of meetings in both Earlham and Bundy Hall. This morning the important thing on schedule was the general Psychology test held in rooms 221 and 321.

GARNER GRANTED LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Professor Frank R. Elliott to Fill the Vacancy During Professor
Garner's Absence

Professor Garner has been granted a leave of absence for the academic year 1928-1929, in order that he may accept a teaching fellowship at the University of Chicago, in connection with which work he will be permitted to pursue his studies for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Professor Frank R. Elliott has been secured to fill the vacancy during Professor Garner's absence. Professor Elliott was Assistant Professor of Biology from 1919 to 1923. He has been working for his Doctor's Degree at Ohio State University, and will complete his work this year.

ALUMNA TO HEAD LATIN DEPARTMENT

Miss Julia Sherow, '22, University of Chicago Graduate, to Fill Place of Dr. Anna Brinton

Julia Sherow, '22, has been secured to take charge of the Latin courses this year, in the absence of Dr. Anna Brinton. Miss Sherow will also assist in the Department of English.

She received the Bryn Mawr Scholarship for academic achievement at the time of her graduation, and spent one year in that institution. She was a member of the faculty of Berea College for some years. The past year, she was in Chicago University, working for her Master's Degree, which was conferred at Commencement time in June.

FACULTY WORK, PLAY, ON THEIR VACATIONS

President Edwards spent the summer at his home on College Avenue, attending to the business of the college each day, at his office in Carpenter Hall. Dean Wright took leave of his office chair long enough to motor through the East with his family. Dr. Grant motored for three weeks in Canada. Coach Ross studied at Chicago University, and Coach Gullion spent the summer at Columbia University, studying for his master's degree.

STUDENT GOVERN- MENT UNDER NEW PLAN

Earlham Affairs to be Governed by
Government

Earlham College will be in the hands of a new student government system at the start of this year. This new form of student government centralizes the administrative powers in a Student Senate, a group of seventeen members, fifteen elected by the three chief organizations on the campus, the dormitory women, the dormitory men, and the day-dodgers; the remaining two members are ex-officio, serving in an advisory capacity only. These two are the President of the Bundy Council, who will act as the speaker of the Senate, and the President of the Earlham Hall Council, who will act as assistant speaker.

Each of the three campus organizations nominated ten members for the Senate; there are no restrictions as to how this may be done—at the general elections last Spring, the members of the three organizations elected five of their own nominees.

The purpose of the new plan, is to create an interest in student affairs, and to more efficiently handle student problems. Among the duties to be taken over are (1) the giving of athletic awards in cooperation with the athletic directors; (2) the selecting of cheer-leaders; (3) the choosing of a booster chairman and committee; (4) the handling of all college social affairs; (5) the control of student general elections; and (6) the furthering of student relations.

The Student Senate is to be fully responsible to the student body: If an interest is taken in the affairs of self-government, and it is shown that the students are capable of governing themselves, it is promised that within

An entirely new cover design will be the outstanding change, along with interior art work never before approached by an Earlham annual.

FIRST CALL FOR FOOT- BALL CANDIDATES

Freshman Class Promises to Aid
Ross in Building Up Quaker
Gridiron Attack

With Coach M. O. Ross expected to arrive in this city, Wednesday, with Frosh registration to open September 13, and with classes to open six days later, the first call for football candidates at Earlham College is expected to be issued about September 17.

Bob Fatherly was the chief loss suffered by Coach M. O. Ross, by graduation last spring, but with a large number of veterans back from last year's eleven, the outlook at the Quaker school is far from gloomy.

Following the opening of classes on September 19, the first game on the card is but ten days away when the Antioch brigade from Yellow Springs invades Reid Field in the opener of the season.

The "Fightin' Quakers" will be led by Captain Ivan "Swede" Druley, who hails from Boston, Indiana, and Hole medal winner last spring for the best all around athlete and scholar that the school produced in 1927-1928. Druley ranked with the state's best last season in point scoring, is a hard hitter and is one of the best pass receivers of the state. His work at one of the wings is expected to be a highlight of the season's play.

Coach Ross should experience no worries in selecting a backfield, or a band of ball toters. Bill Cain, of last year's eleven is planning to enter Indiana University this fall, and the Quaker mentor will have to replace this fleet-footed lad from Hagerstown.

With Bob Miser barking signals, and Conger Reynolds at fullback, and Carlos Jenkins and Charles Loch as probable halfbacks, the Earlham backfields should be well taken care of.

NEW INSTRUCTORS SIGN CONTRACTS

Lehman to Devote Some Time to Music and Hickman to be Acting
Head of Physics

G. A. Lehman, who was connected with Earlham College one year as Professor of Music, and who has been for the past two years Assistant Director of the Westminster Choir, is to come to the college this year a sufficient amount of time to take care of the students in vocal music. Mr. Lehman is well known to Earlham people, being a graduate of Earlham in the class of 1912.

Roger W. Hickman will serve as Acting Professor of Physics for the coming year, and will also serve as head resident in Bundy Hall. He is a native of California, and completed his work at Whittier College. Following his graduation at Whittier, he pursued graduate work at the University of California, where he completed his work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

EARLHAM WEL- COMES CLASS OF 1932

One Hundred Forty Applicants for Admission to the Freshman Class

MANY COME FROM OTHER STATES

With approximately one hundred forty freshmen enrolled, Freshman Week has upheld its usual success in bringing together the new students with the faculty and upperclassmen. An unofficial registration record, taken Thursday night, shows thirty-five new day students and over seventy dormitory freshmen. This record is, naturally, inaccurate, due to the failure of some to sign the registration book and the late arrival of others. The class of '32 has every appearance of being a source of athletic and scholastic material.

Following are the names of the Freshmen dormitory students as registered Thursday night:

Applegate, Margaret.
Aspey, Gail.
Bantz, Herbert.
Bish, Inez.
Borton, Margaret.
Carter, Susan.

FOOTBALL, HOCKEY MARK HOMECOMING

Reunion of Quaker Football
Team of '03 to be Outstanding Event of the Day

Homecoming this year will be celebrated on the day of October 27. In addition to the football tilt, between the Quakers and Manchester, there will be a hockey game between the Earlham women and the all-English women's team. The hockey game should be one of unusual interest, due to the interest resulting from a match played by the same two teams two years ago, in which the English women scored a hard-earned victory over the Earlham varsity.

Professor Trueblood announced that, as a special feature of Homecoming Day, there will take place on that day, one of the most interesting events of the year: a reunion of the football team of twenty-five years ago. This team won renown over the state by defeating every team on its hard schedule, among which were Wabash, the University of Cincinnati, and Rose Poly. The team of '03 was coached by J. F. G. "Long John" Miller, a graduate of Purdue and one of the most notable coaches Earlham has ever had. Mr. Miller conceived the idea of this unique reunion and will undoubtedly be present when his great gridiron team comes together for the first time in a quarter century. The names of the individual players are being withheld from publication at the present, but further details and pictures of the "Fightin' Quakers of 1903" will be available in later issues of The Quaker Quill.

SEPTEMBER 15, 1928

TO THE CLASS OF 1932

My word of welcome to new students is extended most cordially and sincerely. My greatest desire is to bring about the most wholesome co-operation between faculty and students in the achievements of the purposes of the college. The students' reason for attending college should fit into the facilities of the college, both physical and spiritual, so that the accomplishment of that reason would be made the most certain.

There can be no cross purposes in a group of people where the methods of procedure are subordinated to the objectives desired. Most great things in life have been the result of cooperation. The achievement of any objective is entirely dependent upon cooperation, and cooperation is dependent upon this subordination of method to objective.

It is to this sort of a community of fellowship and friendship, of work and play, that a welcome is extended. Let us all pledge ourselves to the most devoted and sincere relationship, to the accomplishment of the purposes that have brought us together.

D. M. EDWARDS.

TO THE FRESHMAN WOMEN

Rather than saying more words of welcome, though they are sincerely yours, may I challenge you to the great adventure of making these your college years the time when you build in to your personality those qualities of which you have dreamed. This is your great opportunity, for during the following days you will establish many new habits and many new forms of action, because of your different environmental conditions. Now, as at no other period in your life, you choose whether you will be satisfied with the good or whether you must seek the best, whether you will joyfully and happily follow the leadership of those who, through varying experiences, have gained wider horizons or whether you will follow the leadership of those who have narrow outlooks. The first is the way to growth; the second is the path to discontent and non-development.

In taking you into our college family we ask the opportunity of knowing you well as friends and of contributing to these four coming years in such a way that we shall at the end of that time have no regrets, academic, social or spiritual.

—ERNESTINE C. MILNER.

TO THE FRESHMAN MEN

To the many sincere expressions of welcome you have been receiving may I add my message of good wishes for you.

This week you are entering a quest that has unlimited possibilities of discovery and for development. If barriers appear the chances are they are of your own making and can be avoided by making adequate and prompt adjustments. To learn this great lesson of character and purposive adjustments to constantly changing situations will be the greatest test of the value of your college education. To really make these adjustments and satisfactorily complete your quest of discovery we must follow the advice of the old Greek Philosopher "Know Thy Self."

I wish for you a college experience that transcends your present anticipation and is filled with truest happiness.

—CLYDE A. MILNER.

Everything for the Earlham Student

921 Main St. Richmond, Ind.

You are now reading the first issue of the Quill which affords us the first opportunity of telling you that we can make a portrait of you that your old Earlham chums will "rave" about.

"TO-MORROW"

Welcome, Freshmen! For the 'teenth time, E. C. welcomes a new class to the ivy-covered walls of one of the oldest colleges in this section of the country. Freshman Week is not so old as the institution; it is a new scheme, used to further the relationship between the new class and the old students and faculty.

In the bygone days, the newly arriving students were tossed directly into a turmoil of activity, without the slightest knowledge of its ways. They were left to shift by themselves; to learn by experience how the Freshmen are literally fed with a spoon.

Instead of being as a monkey-wrench thrown into smooth-acting machinery, the new classes of today enter into the routine of college life with all the efficiency of a well-worn cog in our human machine.

Making friends is an important task to be taken seriously; especially in a college the size of Earlham. Freshman Week makes friends, but the task should not stop there. No one can have too many friends.

Elbert Hubbard brings forth an excellent piece of philosophy, when he says, "If you would have friends; be one." Don't allow your pride to interfere with friendship; don't be half-hearted, say "hello" as if you meant it. This little formality of speaking to those who pass you won't waste your time—courtesy never does so.

Choose those you would have as friends and then make yourself pleasant to them, but be careful of going to the extremes in this respect. Toadying doesn't reward with real Friendship.

Make friends with the Faculty, too; they are human, even though they are educated and intelligent. They eat and drink and sleep like human beings, and they are probably more capable of being real friends than some of the average humans.

Intelligent and well-educated individuals realize the powers of friendship; they know personality, from study and from personal contact. If you can't seem to make the grade, ask your prof for advice. He will attempt to tell you the error of your ways, and, if he can't, he will, at least, understand why you can't make the grade. That is important.

A COUPLE OF OLD TIMERS TALK OVER REAL DAYS

Look at these Frosh, Jim; don't they make you feel like home? Who says the life of a Freshman ain't the life of Riley; gosh, Jim, I never expect to have so much fun again, as I did when we wore green caps. I was sorta homesick, though, when I faced that empty suite on second; bare floors, bare walls, and a broken window; I felt like a ghost. If I had had a chance, I'd hit the road for home, but I couldn't, Jim. The Dean blocked the door, and the busted place in the window was too small for me to jump through. Yeah, I might have opened the windows, but I had a sorta notion then, that those windows were not to be opened—creaky with age, I guess. Well, Jim, I got over that blue feeling after a while; my room-mate had a few pennants to color things a bit, and then we hiked to the city for a load of second-hand furniture. We came back with two goldfish bowls and a couple of crazy signs. We had better luck the next time, I managed to get the wife to lower himself enough to enter a second-hand store instead of moseying around one of those walnut dining room outfits he had his eye on; we spent half of our total assets on a genuine Russian leather sofa and a table with three of its four legs gone; with the other half of our capital, we bought two packages of gum. Gosh, Jim, you remember how comfortable the old den looked. We had to get rid of our goldfish—we had two of them—due to a mania of my side-kick. Wife picked up a little stray kitten, because he wanted to start a zoo, but the darn cat refused to stay on a milk diet, so he took to goldfish; he ate one, but the other goldfish swallowed him—at least, I guess so, because the cat left and the remaining fish shivered as if he was being tickled to death from the inside. When the poor fish died—no, not my room-mate, I found the wife examining it with a magnifying glass. He said he was looking over the scales to see if he could find high C! Gosh, Jim, it was about this time when I was almost drowned. I was cleaning the rooms one day, when I heard someone yell, "Hey, Frosh." I didn't know where the guy was who was yellin' at me, but I stuck my dome out of the window and craned around. The Soph was sitting on the window sill on the floor above, so I asked him politely what he wanted. He dumped the water from a sacred—according to the Dean—fire-bucket on my face, and said he didn't want anything. Gosh, Jim, not a drop of that water passed me by; he couldn't have done a better job if he had used a funnel. I decided to be careful and cautious from then hence, and so as I left Bundy for lunch I got another bucket of water thrown at me, but I fooled 'em; I had my mouth closed.

Remember the fun we had eatin', Jim? Gosh, Jim, I'll never forget the first pitcher of water I spilled, nor the last. I was kindo nervous, I guess, because I couldn't seem to control my elbows. When those girls would talk to me, I couldn't say anything but "no ma'am," and "yes ma'am." I managed to miss faculty tables for two or three times before I got to the "pat-the-bell-table." Gosh, Jim, I couldn't say anything then! Well, I wasn't the only one, even some of those talkative girls got the brakes. I had a lot of darn good tables just the same—even if I did fall in love with each and every girl at each and every table.

I'll tell you, boy, the life of a Freshman is okch; gosh, I didn't mind wearing green caps altho I hated to keep off the grass; some of the other fellows did too, and at a little session we had one night about midnight there was a general confession of sins, and a good time wasn't had by all! Even if we did have to put up posters for the games—say, Jim, do you remember when the advertizing manager gave us a bunch of posters to put in the store windows, and we put them all in one window? Building funeral pyres for the ghosts of defeated football teams had its pleasures, too. We didn't have such a hard time finding wood with the new building under construction, and gosh, Jim, we had some real fires! It was lots of fun standing around the fire with our faces roasting and backs freezing, listening to the speeches from the bashful heroes, and then doing a lot of yelling on our own part. The pajama parade was a real sport too, wasn't it, Jim? Boy, how we blocked the traffic that night! The townspeople didn't get to bed until ten o'clock that night—long after their bed time.

The best time was after the Frosh party; remember, Jim? We went to the midnight show after the party, thirty of us, green caps and all, and didn't get back until two. But when we got back—! Gosh, you remember that don't you, Jim? Every room was stacked, and a couple worse than that. Do you remember that guy on third; you know, the one who had just received a bushel of apples from home? There wasn't a thing in that room over two feet from the floor; when we crossed the room, it was like little Eva crossing on the cakes of ice, with apple juice portraying the rushing river. Then there was that good looking, blacked-haired Freshman on first; the raiders had crushed onions hither and thither, including the walls, in his room. We couldn't even open the door—and live. We paid 'em back, didn't we, boy. Remember how old heavy-shoulders took the door and sill out of the door frame in that Sophomore suite on third. We gave as good as we received as far as stacked rooms were concerned. Remember how the Frosh in 117 cleaned-up single-handed on five Sophs because they surprised him in his sleep, and he thought he was working a math problem, and didn't awaken until the fight was over?

Say what you will, Jim, but gosh, how I envy these green, but growing Frosh. They have four years in which to learn something—gosh, Jim, I hope they do!

EARLHAM MAN, NOTED IN SCIENCE, DIES

The following sketch of the life of Pliny Earle Goddard, '92, appeared in the August 17, 1928, issue of "Science".

Pliny Earle Goddard was born on August 24, 1869. He died on July 12, 1928. His death is a loss for American anthropology that will long be felt. His interest in anthropology was first fostered by personal, intimate contact with California Indians. It was not the occupation with abstract scientific problems that attracted him. It was rather the human interest in their troubles, their thoughts and feelings. It is not an accident that this undertone persisted in all his later scientific work. The native never appealed to him solely as a subject to be examined and dissected, but as a man or woman who had to be understood as moulded by the culture in which he lived.

On this basis, grew up his scientific work, broadening over wider fields, as his experience grew. His first, purely human labors with the Hupa Indians taught him the necessity of studying their language. In Benjamin Ide Wheeler he found an appreciative friend, who led him on in his linguistic studies. With keen understanding for the need of accuracy, he was the first to apply experimental methods to the study of sound systems of American languages. While he remained in California, his interest was centered in the study of the Athapascan tribes of that state, their language, customs, beliefs, and traditions.

The study of the present languages and cultures of these tribes led him soon beyond the limits of California. An understanding of modern conditions requires a study of the history of their development, in particular a knowledge of related tribes. The congeners of the California tribes he had studied live in the far north and in the southwest, and we find him soon extending his studies over these regions.

The opportunity for this extension of his labors was presented by his appointment as curator of Ethnology in the American Museum of Natural History, in New York, in 1909. For the Museum, he investigated the Beaver Indians of Northwestern Canada and, later on, directed his attention to the Apache and Navaho of New Mexico and Arizona.

It was impossible for him, with his ever-widening interests, not to see the close relation between the problems presented by the Southwestern Athapascan tribes and the sedentary tribes of this region, and he became a powerful stimulus for the development of recent activities in the Southwest. In this, the cooperation with Dr. Elsie Clews Parsons was a most important element. In joint labors, a systematic ethnological exploration of the Southwest was planned and is still in progress. Many of the results have been published in the Papers of the American Museum of Natural History, in the publications of the American Folklore Society, and of the American Ethnological Society. While his own published contributions remained confined to the Athapascan tribes, many others are the outcome of his planning.

The task imposed upon him by the administrative work of the Museum also bore excellent fruit. As the horizon of his knowledge expanded, his mastery of the subject grew, and he endeavored to do his share in making available to the general public the results of his studies. The highly instructive and artistic groups, illustrating primitive life, that tell the casual visitor more than large collections, were made under his directions, and his handbooks of Northwest Coast and Southwestern culture are models of a concise, clear representation of primitive culture.

The extent of scientific work conducted under his guidance proves that the scientific tasks of the Museum were not neglected as against its educational functions.

Much of Dr. Goddard's influence on the development of anthropology was due to his personality. He was a man of strong principles; uncompromising in regard to fundamentals; yielding when only minor differences of opinion were at stake. His likes and dislikes were equally intense. Straightforward in his own outlook upon life, he was intolerant of anything that appeared as opportunism. He was particularly appreciative of the enthusiasm of youth and, hence, exerted a strong influence over the young. He was not given to formal instruction by means of lectures, but through personal contact with his students of Columbia University, in work under his direction in the Museum, in friendly companionship, he gave to them fully from his store of knowledge.

For many years, he was entrusted with the editorship of the American Anthropologist, and he served the American Anthropological Association, the American Folklore Society, and the American Ethnological Society in many capacities. We all shall miss him sorely, not least, myself, to whom his personal friendship has meant much for many years—years of severe stress, and years of quiet work.

NEW BUSINESS MANAGER

Binford is a graduate of Chicago University, and has done graduate work at the Columbia School of Business Administration. For seven years, he was vocational director at Logansport High School, and, for the past year, he has held the position of business manager at Teachers College, in Indianapolis. Jesse Beals, formerly business manager at Earlham, has accepted a similar position at Fiske University, at Nashville, Tennessee.

FOOTBALL CANDIDATES

Walter Johnson, of Indianapolis, who starred for Technical before coming to Earlham will come in for consideration, as will Dewey Igelman, Morton high school recruit who will enter the Earlham school this fall.

Wayne Routh, considered the best athlete ever turned out by the St. Andrew Catholic high school of this city, will likewise enter the Quaker school this fall. Routh was adjudged the honor student at the Catholic school for 1927-1928.

A number of veteran linesmen are expected back for the 1928 season, and these men are the ones who pave the way for the runs made by the backfield men.

Fremont Moore, a tackle from last year's eleven was lost by graduation, while Fin Bond, last season quarterback will not be back.

The Earlham schedule is considered as stiff as ever, and by the time the final game of the season with Butler on November 17, rolls around, Coach Ross should have an eleven molded together, capable of giving the Butler gridders something to worry about.

A general resume of the candidates expected to report for the first call are: backfield, Carlos Jenkins, of Anderson, Ind.; Tom Felix, of Scottsdale, Pa.; Charles Loch of Chicago; Bob Miser of Paughkeepsie, N. Y.; Conger Reynolds, of Hagerstown; Owight Young, of Richmond; Walter Johnson, of Indianapolis; Duane Igelman, of Richmond; Wayne Routh, of Richmond and Scott Porter, of Richmond.

Ends: Captain Ivan Druley, of Boston, Ind.; Glenn Smith, of Carmel, Ind. and Guile Stowell, of Chicago. Tackles: Lee Felix, of Scottsdale, Pa.; Fred Roeder, of Carmel, Ind.; Lowell Brooks, of Pennville, Ind., and Lowell Stanley, of Plainfield, Ind. Guards: Austin Wildman, of Selma, Ohio; George Hull, of Gosport, N. Y.; Ralph

EARLHAM CURRICULUM

College such as Earlham in Indiana and Carleton in Minnesota secure much the same results in a quite different way. They have a minimum of prescribed work, but their curriculum material is grouped into broad divisions. At Carleton these are (a) language and literature; (b) philosophy, religion and education; (c) political and social science; (d) science; (e) fine arts; (f) hygiene, physical education and athletics.

At Earlham, which may be taken as a rather extreme illustration of the method, there are four groups; Philosophy-history, English literature, languages and science-mathematics. First year students are required to pursue a one-hour course in physiology and hygiene and a two-hour course in English composition. These are the only unconditional requirements for graduation.

Builders of the modern college curriculum intend that the student shall have some familiarity with certain methods—the scientific method, the historical method, the method of criticism. Above all else he should know and be able to use the method of creation, which consists in recognizing differences and then resolving them into a larger whole and making them over into vital human forces. If the college can give him the mastery of these tools and these methods it will certainly help him to be a creator and will somewhat have justified its curriculum.—By Robert L. Kelly, in the N. Y. Times.

TIVOLI NEWS

Eastern Studio To Make Talkies

Plans for the organization of a department to make short features with sound in the Hollywood Studios are announced by Jesse L. Lasky.

For the first time in his career as a producer, Lasky will have created a department to produce a short reel and sound features. These one, two and three reel features will be part of a tremendous program of feature length pictures with sound already announced. Many will be filmed in the California studios and others are to be made at the Long Island plant which has just been reopened.

"With Paramount entering the sound picture field," Lasky said, "we will be active in making short features. These will be synchronized with vocal and musical accompaniment. Approximately 50 feature length productions will also have sound effects. It is our plan to present a complete show in sound, including stage unit productions similar to those offered at the bigger theaters. Smaller theaters throughout the country will be given entertainment they have never been able to obtain.

"Owing to the proximity of certain stage talent to the Long Island studios it will be necessary to make a number of short features there but the rest will be produced in Hollywood. "Short features of various types are to be made," Lasky continued, "there will be comedy skits done with vocal synchronization along with a thousand and one other novelties I have in mind. Stars from the New York musical comedy, legitimate and motion picture realms will appear in them. To do this properly we will create a special department to supervise the actual filming of short subjects. Today I am not ready to announce the personnel of this department but I will do so within a short time."

To old friends there is no gift that is more personal, or that will be more appreciated, than your portrait.

Make an appointment now. You will solve the gift problem and avoid the Christmas rush.
