WABASH TAKES CONTEST DECISION CAME AS A SURPRISE

General Opinion Was That T. E. Jones, Earlham's Representative, Should Have Received Second Place

By a decision that completely upset the expectations of the big audience, and that was received with much dissatisfaction generally, Earlham was placed in a tie for fourth place with Franklin in the state oratorical contest at Tomlinson Hall, Indianapolis, last night. Wabash was given first place; De Pauw, second; Notre Dame and Butler tied for third, and Hanover fifth.

With but few exceptions the prevailing opinion at the close of the contest was that the work of T. E. Jones and Francis W. Wenninger, of Notre Dame, stood out above that of the other five contestants. By reason of the fact, however, that Byron Price, Wabash's representative, received three firsts on his manuscript, Wabash won the struggle. His subject was "Natural Forces in the Movement Toward World's Peace."

The announcement of the decision of the judges was received with much surprise, as it was thought that the honor would go either to Earlham or to Notre Dame. Wenninger was Notre Dame's representative last year and he was a close second to Levi Pennington, who won first for Earlham.

Previous indications that the contest would be one of the most interesting and keenly contested ever held, were carried out. But the placing of Notre Dame in a tie for third place, and Earlham in a tie for fourth place, was quite unexpected.

The victory of Byron Price last night was the first that has fallen

INSTRUCTIVE SUBJECTS ARE UP

Science Club Holds Unusually Interesting Meeting Monday

At the Science Club meeting Monday evening a very interesting student program was given. Miss Elizabeth Morrison discussed "The Human Body as a Machine," and showed that the body was far more efficient than any inanimate machine. Raymond Myrick gave an interesting talk on "Utilization of Wood Waste," as given in a paper by Prof. Frankforter, head of the chemical department of Wisconsin. This subject is of great importance for it deals with a recent process of extracting resin, tar and turpentine from wood waste. The meeting is considered one of the best of the year.

SPECIAL SPEAKER IN CHAPEL

Dr. Combs, of Greenville, Tenn., Talked Thursday Morning

Dr. Combs, of Greenville, Tenn., who is engaged in educational work in the eastern part of that state, spoke in chapel Thursday morning. Although his talk was short, it was interesting; it consisted of a brief review of the historical features of the eastern part of Tennessee. Dr. Combs is a former resident of Thorntown, Ind., and is a graduate of Asbury College, now De Pauw. He is on his way home after attending a meeting of college presidents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which was held recently at Greencastle.

The final announcement of the arrangements for the trip to the Earlham-De Pauw basket-ball game and state oratorical contest at Indianapolis, were also announced.

EARLHAM ROOTING GOOD KEPT THINGS ON THE JUMP

Quaker Delegation at Indianapolis Made Itself Known Both At Game and At the Oratorical Contest

Earlham was strong with the enthusiasm end of yesterday's list of events, although things did not turn out as well as might have been. The basket-ball game was lost to De Pauw not so much because the Methodists have a better team than Earlham, but more as a result of the failure of the Quaker squad to judge adequately the strength of the De Pauw five. First place in the contest was lost, it is true, but every Earlham supporter, as well as many others, thought that Jones, the stellar Quaker orator, should have received the honor, and at the least, should not have been given a position lower than second.

But through it all the Cream and Old Gold rooters made themselves heard, and everybody present, both at the basket-ball game at the Y. M. C. A., and the oratorical contest at Tomlinson Hall, knew that Earlham was there.

Earlham had the second biggest delegation of any of the out-of-town colleges. De Pauw sent up about two hundred from Greencastle, and the Quaker college came in a close second with about one hundred and sixty. Butler, which is located at Indianapolis, naturally had the largest delegation at the contest last night. The other college representations were not nearly so large as those of Earlham and De Pauw and Butler.

The Earlham headquarters, while not definitely fixed, was at the Indianapolis Y. M. C. A., while the

DR. HOLMES TALKS ON GAS

Presents New Features on Richmond's Present Question

Prof. H. N. Holmes, head of the department of Chemistry at Earlham, has given some original and hitherto untouched light on the present position of the city of Richmond relative to its gas light and fuel question. According to the statement of Dr. Holmes in a recent interview, the city authorities have not touched on the merits of the case. He explained that light units have nothing whatever to do with the heat contained in gas, and also designated the difference between the quantity consumed in heating and in illumination. Dr. Holmes said that, in his opinion, the price of gas in Richmond is too high. Earlham College is supplied by the same company that furnishes gas to the city.

DIAMOND TALENT STRONG EARLHAM CHANCES ARE GOOD

Seven of Last Year's Team Back and New Material on Hand Make Prospects Very Promising

There is many a slip between a mid-winter pennant and the coveted secondary championship which by the middle of June, falls to the college team of Indiana with the class of the bunch, however, Earlham has cause for optimism concerning baseball prospects for the coming season. It looks as if Earlham's best baseball season was in store.

Just what the outcome will be is undoubtedly a guess. It will have to be worked out. Seven old men of last year's squad will be in college and ready to give any newcomers a scrap for their positions. Capt. Stanley, who played first last year, and Sanders, an outfielder, are the only two men whose positions will have to be filled this year.

The pitching staff this year will be considerably stronger than it was last year, and will be composed of Hays, mainstay last season, together with Lewis and Wilcoxon, of the Freshman Class. Hays has been working out in the gym and from all appearances he will be in better form than last year. Both Lewis and Wilcoxon have good reputations, but it will take the test to find out if they can deliver the goods. Wilcoxon when in form throws with abundant speed, which should make an excellent combination with Hays's "fade-away." Beard and probably French, both old men, will be in line for the receiving job, together with Lamb, a Freshman, who has been working

DEPAUW WONT TIGHT GAME EARLHAM LOST BY TWO POINTS

Overconfidence, which Resulted in Some Poor Playing, Responsible for Quaker Defeat at Indianapolis

The same thing that caused Earlham to go down in defeat before the De Pauw football team at Richmond last fall resulted in the downfall of the Quaker basket-ball squad before the Methodists at the Y. M. C. A., at Indianapolis yesterday afternoon, by a score of 22 to 20, and that was overconfidence, which resulted in some poor playing.

When the Earlham squad settled down to play there was some real basket-ball, and clearly out-classed the De Pauw quintet. The game was lost in the last five minutes of play in a whirlwind finish by De Pauw, when four straight field goals, and two foul goals placed the victors in the lead. Up until that time the Quakers had a substantial lead, although at the end of the first half the margin was only two points, the score standing 10 to 8.

Earlham took a big lead during the last half of the first period; at the end of fifteen minutes of play in the final period the score stood 20 to 12. De Pauw kept up one steady gait throughout, and in the last five minutes, when the game was won, tied up the score, and then, when Harding dribbled the ball from under his own goal the full length of the floor and tossed a basket, practically unguarded, the end was in sight—a De Pauw victory; for by De Pauw's holding to the ball on toss-ups, Earlham had not another good shot at the De Pauw basket. Following the removal of Furnas, because of four personal fouls, with but five minutes to play in the last half, the Methodists finished in a

HE DENOUNCED "WHITE LIES"

The Rev. John Lightbourne Was Chapel Speaker Tuesday

The Rev. John Lightbourne, rector of the Richmond Episcopal Church, was the chapel speaker Tuesday morning. He chose as his subject a discussion of personal power as related more particularly to telling the truth. During his talk the Rev. Mr. Lightbourne made a scathing attack on lying, and roundly denounced the habitual teller of falsehoods. His denunciation of the lightly considered "white lies" was bitter. Tuesday's talk by the Episcopal rector was the first he has given at Earlham since his location at Richmond, and he made a marked impression.

CHAPEL APPRECIATION.

There are, no doubt, grounds for believing the student body of Earlham somewhat perverse in their judgment of chapel. Within the memory of the present Senior Class chapel speeches were the almost unfailing rule, and by the talkative they were on the whole considered a bore. Chapel speeches are now the exception, and as The Earlhamite has said, it seems that the general sentiment among the student body is against a program consisting simply of devotional exercises and announcements.

Observers, taking a cursory glance, may easily become disgusted with the student body for its seeming lack of consistency. It is true that the student body has changed largely since chapel speeches were the rule and it might be argued that the student mind has become more appreciative. That view is undoubtedly a pleasant one to meditate upon and a careful view of Earlham student life as a whole would lead the observer to place some faith in the view. However, the more fundamental reason is that it was the talkative, the shallow thinker, and the superficial observer who considered the chapels under the old regime a bore. There were to be sure chapel speeches which were scarcely worth the labor of moving the lower maxillary yet such were the exception and the speeches were as a whole pleasureable and profitable.

The chapel talks which have been made during the present year have been on the whole very well received by the students. It is not the custom for students to wait outside the auditorium doors or go to the front of the chapel to express their appreciation to the speaker. Such a procedure would be impractical and a bore. It may be that the faculty does not know that the students approve chapel speeches, yet the perception which many of them display in the class room, would lead the student to believe that they should sense the student mind without great difficulty. Nevertheless a member of the faculty has made the statement that it "seems preposterous" that the sentiment should grow among the faculty of making chapel talks since the student body is so unappreciative. The opinion is based on the fact that here and there over the auditorium students are often seen taking a last look at book before the coming test of the next hour, and one or two are so unappreciative as to read the local news in the home paper. Conclusions should not be drawn from cursory observation of the careless and shallow thinker or the obviously unappreciative. The real mind of the student body lies deeper and cannot be rightly judged by superficial observation. The best thought is probably the least easily discerned.

WABASH TAKES CONTEST

to Wabash in eighteen years, since 1893, when Dr. Macintosh, now president of Wabash, received the honor.

The representatives of Notre Dame, Franklin and Hanover participated in the contest last year. Hanover was placed in the same position last night as a year ago.

A big audience was present in Tomlinson Hall to attend the contest, although the immense size of the building made the crowd seem smaller than it really was. Butler naturally had the biggest delegation present. De Pauw's representatives were largely in evidence, and Earlham came in, probably, for the third largest representation. The various rooting squads kept things humming before the orations began, college songs and yells echoing throughout the hall.

The contest began at 8:15 o'clock and was presided over by Ferdinand Tannenbaum, of Wabash, president of the state oratorical association. He introduced the orators and their respective subjects. The Indianapolis Manual Training High School Orchestra gave a program after 7:45 o'clock. The Indianapolis Orpheum Quartet sang.

The orators and their subjects in the order in which they appeared, were as follows:

T. E. Jones, Earlham, "The White Slave Traffic."

Byron Price, Wabash, "Natural Forces in the Movement Toward World's Peace."

Fred E. Schortemeier, Butler, "The Problem of Economic Equity."

Harvey Hartsock, De Pauw, "The American Miniator."

Fred C. Millis, Hanover, "The New Puritan."

Ralph Dobbins, Franklin, "The Alien Advance."

Francis W. Wenninger, "Notre Dame, "Poverty and Crime."

The program opened with an invocation pronounced by the Rev. H. C. Clippenger, pastor of the Edwin Ray M. E. Church of Indianapolis.

T. E. Jones, Earlham's orator, was first, and had a greater disadvantage than any of the other speakers. His subject, "The White Slave Traffic," was handled with marked unity. In general the Earlham orator explained the awful growth and course of the white slave traffic, and in the latter part he offered a number of solutions for the prevention of the harrowing business. His voice was fine. It was strong and penetrated every corner of the great hall. His enunciation was almost perfect. Just a trifle unnatural in his gestures at first, Jones soon slipped into a natural movement that only more forcibly brought out the fact that he displayed greater earnestness and conviction in his oration than any one of the other speakers. It was the general opinion that Jones should have been given nothing less than second place.

Price, who followed Jones, evolved his oration upon the basis of pointing out the general progress of the world's peace movement, and its causes, and led to the conclusion that ultimate universal peace was inevitable. His voice was not overly strong. The thought of the oration was fine. His gestures were tended somewhat toward mechanical effort at first, but he soon took on an easy, natural movement. The Wabash man did not close as strong as he was in opening of his oration or in the middle.

Schortemeier, of Butler, touched upon the present prevailing economic condition and finished with a treatment of trusts and their proper attitude and sphere. His voice was fair, but the thought of his work was good. His gestures were inclined toward restlessness.

The strength of the foundation and its present resultant of our government, was the general idea of Hanover's representative. His voice was good, but when forced to its full volume it became almost grating to the ear. The thought of his oration was good, and his delivery was good. He used but few gestures.

Hartsock, of De Pauw, centered his general idea on the all-consuming passion of America to-day, wealth, but with its present gradual change for the better. His voice, the thought of his work, and his delivery were good. His gestures were natural.

Franklin's orator, Dobbins, opened his oration with a reminiscent introduction, but worked out his subject in a general defense of immigration. He spoke rapidly, his voice was good, his thought was good, but his gestures were mechanical.

Wenninger, of Notre Dame, whose place before the decision of the judges was announced was generally accredited by the audience as first or second, was somewhat general in his treatment of his subject. He worked out his idea by showing the general relations between poverty and crime. Economic reconstruction was one of the preventatives he recommended. Wenninger's voice was good, easy-going and slow; the thought expressed, while general, was fine; and his delivery was excellent.

The judges on thought and composition were P. J. Wreinsch, of Wisconsin; F. A. Fetter, of Cornell; and E. M. Holliday, of Illinois. Judges on delivery were A. L. Gates, of Miami; B. C. Van Wic, of Cincinnati, and Albert J. Venneman, speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives.

The state oratorical association executive committee, of which Homer L. Morris, of Earlham, is a member, held a meeting at the Denison Hotel, Indianapolis, yesterday afternoon. A number of business matters were considered, and the plans for the contest were completed. To Indiana falls the honor of naming the president of the interstate oratorical association, and at the meeting the Hanover representative, who has not yet been elected, was chosen to fill the office.

other college delegations spent their spare time there.

The Earlham crowd began to congregate in Indianapolis Thursday afternoon. The big crowd, however, went over to the Capital City yesterday morning on a special traction car that left the college at 7:25 o'clock. About eighty made the trip in the special. The members of the team and a few others went down at 10 o'clock over the Pennsylvania.

Practically the entire crowd from Earlham spent a part of yesterday morning visiting the present session of the General Assembly of Indiana and saw law-making in the process. In the afternoon a number attended the various theaters, while the bigger part of the delegation witnessed the Earlham-De Pauw basket-ball game at the Y. M. C. A. Last night a few attended the theater, but practically all the Earlham crowd were present at the contest. Many friends in Indianapolis, and a few students live there, and the time between the general activities was spent with friends or their families.

At the contest last night the Earlham crowd, reinforced by many alumni, sat in a body, as did all the other college delegations. The Quakers had the two left sections of the main seating portion down next to the platform. De Pauw was placed at the end of the right balcony section; Butler was in the two right sections of the main floor; Wabash was directly behind Butler, but the rooters moved up into the gallery; Hanover, Notre Dame and Franklin occupied the balcony section opposite De Pauw.

The speaking stage of the hall was profusely decorated in large American flags and bunting.

whirlwind and proceeded to land the game. Stanley supplanted Furnas at guard.

The contest was rough and exciting. De Pauw got away with a good lead, 7 to 2, before Earlham pulled together. Then the Quakers by some real playing rolled four field goals and gained the lead. The good work was continued in the second half for about fifteen minutes, and then the blow-up came.

While the loss of the game in De Pauw will not be a blot on Earlham's record for the Indiana secondary championship, the defeat will not necessarily put the Quakers out of the running. A victory over Wabash would practically give Earlham the honors, for Wabash crimped the Methodists by an overwhelming score, and Earlham only lost to the De Pauw squad through a spell of poor playing.

The excitement during the last few minutes of play was intense. Earlham's big delegation was shouting encouragement to the Quakers to hold the Methodists, and the De Pauw crowd, almost as big as Earlham's, was screaming and yelling for De Pauw to land the game.

Harding, captain of the De Pauw team, was out of the game during the first half, a spectator in the De Pauw bleachers, with a sprained back. The call of the game was too strong, however, and he donned a uniform and went in at forward in the second half. Gant went to Hawthorne's guard.

Earlham's team work was better than that of the Methodists, but the trouble was Earlham's failure to keep it up. De Pauw took advantage of the situation, and pulled the game out of the fire. The work of Captain Reagan was good.

De Pauw won the toss, and Earlham had to throw against the sun. Referee Cook blew the starting whistle at 3:41. De Pauw scored first, a field goal by Walker in 1:05. Rowe evened things up, however, when, twenty-five seconds later, he shot a basket. For five minutes the play was pretty even, but De Pauw took the lead by one point when Leazenby tossed a foul goal. Then De Pauw made the margin substantial with Leazenby's field goal, in 6:20, and Walker's toss from the floor, in 9:10. Earlham took a decided brace then, and, although unable to score for seven minutes, her play was much better. Gilbert started Earlham's rush with a field goal in sixteen minutes, after dribbling the ball the full length of the court. Fifty seconds later Conrad repeated with a field goal, and two more by Reagan, in 17:10 and in 18:50, placed Earlham's score at 10. Leazenby tossed a foul goal for De Pauw immediately following Gilbert's field goal.

The Quaker squad then went after things right. After four minutes Rowe shot an easy basket, and in 6:40 Reagan threw a foul goal. Then Conrad tossed two pretty baskets, in 8:10 and in 8:35. Following Rowe's goal Harding tossed a foul goal. After Conrad's second goal Harding also shot a basket from the field, in 10:40. Just before Rowe rolled another goal, in 14:50, Furnas had his fourth personal foul called, and was removed. Stanley went to guard. After two minutes of play, the Methodists started at it. Walker shot a goal in 15:40, Dewey repeated in 16:50; Harding threw a foul goal; Leazenby brought De Pauw's score up to within one point from Earlham, in 17:10; and amidst intense excitement, Harding tied up the score with a foul goal. Then, with one minute and ten seconds to play, Harding, after four passes back and forth across the court to Leazenby, threw a field goal, and De Pauw went into the lead, 22 to 20. Time was taken out for one of the De Pauw players. The ball was out of bounds and Stanley threw it into the court, where, after it reached the center of the floor, time was called.

In the last minute of play Captain Reagan was hit in the mouth, during a scramble for the ball, by Captain Harding, and two front teeth were loosened.

The line-up was as follows.

DE PAUW	EARLHAM
Leazenby	Forward
Gant, Harding	Forward
	Reagan

The affair will be run in Chicago.

ENTHUSIASM IS GIVEN BOOST

Oratorical and Basket-ball Meeting at Chapel on Wednesday

A state oratorical and Earlham-De Pauw basket-ball enthusiasm meeting was held during the chapel period Wednesday morning. Before the session was finished things were humming. Praise for T. E. Jones, Earlham's oratorical representative, was profuse.

Prof. E. P. Trueblood presided at the meeting and talks were made by Prof. Elbert Russell, Prof. W. C. Woodward and Paul Furnas. Prof. Russell was introduced as Earlham's first state oratorical representative, in 1893. The Quaker college finished third that year; Indiana was first and De Pauw second. Prof. Russell's subject was "Job's Inquiry." Prof. Trueblood's talk was a short discussion of "The Man, the Message and the Masses." Each of the speakers expressed confidence of Earlham's success.

DIAMOND TALENT STRONG

out in the gym and who shows signs of becoming a good catcher. Beard will probably catch Hays as they formed the southpaw battery last year. The other prospective candidates will probably do the receiving when Wilcoxon or Lewis are on the firing line. Beard has had the advantage of a year's experience, and by developing a better whip to second he will probably be able to take care of the catching department.

Brubaker, who put up a very fast game at short last year, will be back next term to fight it out for his position. Reagan, who played in the garden last year, and who was the best base-runner and run-getter on the team, will try out for the infield, either at short or second, and will give some one a run for the position. Moffett, a Freshman, is a strong candidate for the job. Furnas, who held second last year, will be ready to fight for the position; Williams, a freshman from Spiceland Academy, and who would make a good mate for Moffett around the second sack, is out for the place. Williams and Moffett played together four years on their academy team. Furnas is a fast fielder although not strong with the stick, but his former experience gives him a better chance for the position.

First base is really the only doubtful position in the infield, and there seems to be abundant material for the sack. Furnas and Bruner, both old men, would be capable of taking care of this position. Johnson, a new man, will be in college next term and besides being a good sticker, he is a fast fielder. He will undoubtedly make the man that beats him out for the position, burn things up around the initial bag.

Captain Wilson, who is a stone wall on defense, and a daring man on bases, will undoubtedly play third. He is a left-hand batter and strong with the stick. Last year he played an excellent game on third, though bothered during the latter part of the season with an injured arm. He knows baseball and this, together with his popularity, should make him an excellent leader.

The outfield material will be plentiful, but the men that make the garden positions will have to be good stickers and fast on the bases. Reagan, Furnas, Bruner and Wilson could be shifted to the out-field and would be capable of taking care of the positions in good style. Beard could be shifted to a garden position when he is not on the receiving line, as he is a good man with the stick. Beery and Lybolt are promising men for the outfield.

Manager Bruner has not completed the schedule, but between 15 and 20 games will be played with college teams in Ohio and Indiana.

TO STROLL AS IN THE PAST

Earlham Day Student Girls Will not Be Restricted

Following a protest, Tuesday, by the day student girls at Earlham, that they should be allowed the privilege of strolling on the campus, Dean Catherine Snepp consented that the proposed restriction should be removed from the rules to be adopted by their student government.

The reason the clause was first inserted was because it was claimed that the dormitory girls were jealous of the privilege given the "Day Dodgers." The latter called attention to the fact that if they did not walk on the campus during study hours they would never get a chance to do it. They also declared that jealousy on the part of the dorm. girls was not a sufficient reason for refusing them the right to the campus. They claim that they were surprised to learn of the suggestion from the faculty since there has never been any complaint that they have abused the privilege.

TO BE PRESS CLUB'S GUEST

J. Bennett Gordon, one of the best known newspaper men in Indiana, has been invited by the Earlham Press Club to be its guest, March 7, at a stag dinner. Mr. Gordon graduated from Earlham college in 1898, and was for several years editor of the Evening Item. Later he was associated with The Milwaukee Journal and during the past year, has been associate editor of the Indianapolis Sun.

PROF. JESSUP IS AT INDIANA

Prof. Walter A. Jessup, of Noblesville, who has been at the head of the Earlham summer school teachers' training course for three years, has been elected to fill temporarily a position as instructor in the Indiana University summer normal school department. Prof. Jessup will get his Ph. D. degree at Columbia University this year.

SPECIAL DINNER TO STUDENTS

Washington's birthday was celebrated at Earlham Wednesday evening with a special dinner for the dormitory students. The girls appeared in Colonial costume. Flags and candles were used in the dining room decorations. The dinner is an annual affair, and dates from the voluntary discontinuance of Washington birthday class scrap by the class of 1905, when its members were Sophomores.

Biological Department Experiments with Filter Plant

The students of the biological department have been testing the efficiency of the West Richmond Sewage Plant. It is found that before entering the filters and vats of this plant the sewage contains approximately 2,000,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, but when turned into Clear Creek, after treatment it has only 300 bacteria to the same amount of waste. It is also interesting to know that the tap water used at Earlham contains 450 bacteria to the cubic centimeter. From this it seems that the waste water after passing through the plant would be more healthful for drinking purposes than the water now used at the college.

MISS HILL ON THE DAILY MAROON

Miss Marjorie Hill, ex-'10, now attending the University of Chicago, is a member of the staff of the Daily Maroon. A short time ago the girls of the university published a special issue, and Miss Hill was elected editor-in-chief. The Chicago papers featured the issue and gave the ex-Earlhamite special credit.

FINALLY DECIDE ON THE PLAY

The day students accepted the report of the play committee at a meeting Tuesday noon and decided to give Pinero's drama, "Sweet Lavender," April 7. The cast has not been fully approved by the faculty, but as soon as favorable action is taken rehearsals will commence.

RECEIVE GRADUATE OFFERS

I. U. and Cornell Scholarships Are Now Announced

Announcement has been received at Earlham of ten graduate fellowships to be awarded by the faculty of Indiana University to graduates of other Indiana colleges. Each scholarship is worth $200 and exemption from term fees per annum. The fellowships do not apply either to law or to medicine. Application for the offer must be in by March 15.

Official announcement has also been received of three fellowships and six scholarships offered by the Sage School of Philosophy of Cornell University. Application for these must be in by April 15. The fellowships are worth $500 per annum, and the scholarships, $300 a year.

"BOYS" TREATED IN CHAPEL

Chapel on Monday morning was taken up by Prof. Laurence Hadley, when he read a most interesting paper on "Boys." The talk was a serious treatment, and Prof. Hadley gave some unusually good advice. While the subject matter dealt principally with boys in general, there was a special treatment of those who are in college.

ANOTHER FOOTBALL DATE OUT

Another Earlham football date for next fall has been announced, in the publication of the schedule of Rose Polytechnic, at Terre Haute, which shows the Quaker eleven to have a game at Terre Haute on Saturday, October 21.
